

Retirement of Marion Fullard

Marion Fullard will retire at the end of this term after eighteen years of exemplary work at Lindal and Marton Primary School.

Over the years she has concentrated on the basic fundamentals of education with those entering school and all former pupils who have derived much benefit from her emphasis on first principles, particularly stressing reading, will surely want to join the staff, governors, pupils and parents in thanking her for all her conscientious hard work and will want to wish her a long, active and happy retirement.

We will all miss you.

If you would like to make a donation towards Marion's retirement present, please send to the Head, David Barlow at the school.

Lindal and Marton Primary School Offstead Inspection

The inspection took place in early October over a period of three days. The team of four inspectors observed a considerable number of lessons and spoke at length with the head, the staff, governors, pupils and parents. Briefly, the inspectors' report states that this is a very good school with pupils attaining high standards, a powerful family ethos and energetic and clear-sighted leadership and management.

The inspectors commented particularly on the high standards in English and Mathematics and the excellence of the pupils' attitude and behaviour. They believe that the school has progressed well since its last inspection and acknowledge that the school is well aware of the limited space available for the reception children, and has plans in hand to deal with this. They stressed that the varied curriculum, including French, is a major factor in fostering the pupils' academic achievement and that, to cap it all, the quality of education provided by the school is very good. What could be more complimentary?

Lindal can be proud of its school
